

The Voice of Art's
"Fine Art Festival"
On the Sharon Green

Memorial Day Weekend

May 24–25, 2025 (10am-5pm)

Free and Open to the Public
Fine Art & Functional Art

The Voice of Art is thrilled to invite you to its FIFTH annual outdoor juried fine art show, "Fine Art Festival" On the Sharon Green. This show will be a highlight for collectors and residents from the Tri-State region, New England and beyond. The Litchfield Hills have a history and reputation of featuring top fine artists from across the country, and also many well-known and beloved New England and CT artists who are widely admired by art enthusiasts. Attracting thousands of visitors, the festival will provide each exhibitor the opportunity to show his or her work to its best advantage, to support the purchase of original fine art and handmade functional art, and to foster art appreciation. All work will be juried on originality, workmanship, and professional presentation, with the expectation that all work displayed at the Festival will reflect the high caliber indicated in the images the applicant initially submitted for jury.

The Voice of Art is committed to offering its best promotional efforts in order to present featured artists' high-quality work for maximum results. To responsibly meet this time of challenge, TVOA will encourage optimal participation in this live art event by delivering multiple digital channels for viewers, reaching a broader audience while ensuring public health and safety.

TVOA's highlighted key efforts will include:

- the event press release, sent to many local newspapers and community digital platforms (civic, cultural, and tourism organizations)
- 100 Festival lawn signs displayed on major roads all over the Greater Litchfield County (subject to the permit from the town authority)
- Show invitation postcards and brochures, distributed to hundreds of businesses in the Litchfield Hills communities
- Social media platforms: shared through multiple social media groups in Litchfield and the surrounding communities
- TVOA E-Newsletters featuring the festival and sent to its thousands of subscribers multiple times
- FAF ONLINE CATALOG featuring all artists' profile pages, linked to their websites and social media accounts to reach broader audiences for a month for maximum exposure

Town of Sharon in the Litchfield Hills

Known for its grand estates, the Town of Sharon is a quaint town in Litchfield County in Connecticut and a civic-minded community that is centered on an enormous Town Green featuring a handsome stone Hotchkiss Library, a red-brick Sharon Historical Society. Nestled in the foothills of the Berkshires, Sharon has very beautiful areas to walk or hike, providing many opportunities for recreation and a way to enjoy the scenic beauty. It is also home to lovely farm lands to visit and enjoy. A stone clock tower erected in 1885-86 welcomes visitors from neighboring New York State and still provides them with the accurate time. Residents are justly proud of the TriArts Sharon Playhouse, a summer theater that now offers productions year round. Depending on the season, you can pick your own strawberries, raspberries, apples and pumpkins at Ellsworth Hill Orchard and Berry Farm, and you can always explore flora and fauna at the Sharon Audubon Center, which has over eleven miles of scenic hiking trails on 1,147 acres of mixed forest, meadows, wetlands, ponds and streams.

Truly an historical town, but at the same time, proximity to Manhattan keeps this corner of Connecticut contemporary. The Litchfield Hills are a popular escape for city folk, who in turn have helped raise the bar for restaurants and accommodations in the area — turning what has long been a destination for antiquers into a haven for foodies, as well. Its shops and restaurants, set around the historic green and immediate area, contribute to the 18th century New England town atmosphere. And, along with the beautiful rural setting that includes Twin Lakes and the Wononskopomuc Lake, Lime Rock Park and Salisbury Ski Jumps offer many outdoor activities.
